National Association of Agricultural Educators Convention

NCIS participated in the National Association of Agricultural Educators (NAAE) Annual Professional Development Convention on December 2 in Las Vegas, NV with over 750 educators attending. The NAAE is a federation of state agricultural educator associations with more than 7,800 members. Members are involved in school-based agricultural education at all levels from middle school through postsecondary and is composed of state and national agricultural education leaders. Dr. Laurence Crane, NCIS, represented the crop insurance industry and discussed how crop insurance can be used to manage risk. He also discussed careers in crop insurance, encouraging participants to include crop insurance as a potential career path for their students.
